

Acknowledgments

This book owes a great debt of gratitude to the many people who frequent Oracle-related electronic forums and lists. Here, questions get asked and suggestions, opinions, and knowledge get freely provided in an extraordinary exchange of group problem-solving. Some of these problems concern ad hoc queries. The people who asked questions about ad hoc queries or who offered responses to these questions provided the intellectual grist for this book. Exposure to these people truly deepened our own understanding of, and appreciation for, the art in crafting ad hoc queries. To remove the specific context within which query problems first appeared online, we have generalized both the questions and discussions that appear in this book.

We specifically wish to thank Dave Aman, Bambi Bellows, J.R. Benson, Peter Brenner, Lito Dizon, Charles Dye, Greg Grimes, Altan Khendup, Suresh Manyam, John Peterson, Paul Picciotta, Phil Pitha, Tom Robbins, and Jared Still, who volunteered their time and knowledge to review and comment on portions of the book. They provided many useful suggestions that made the book stronger. At Oracle Corporation, Peter Vasterd coordinated the review of technical portions of the book. We thank him, Thomas Kurian, and Linda Willis for their cooperation and helpful comments.

We tried mightily to remove any errors or inaccuracies that filtered into the book, but undoubtedly a few will remain to be uncovered as the book gets used. None of the people acknowledged above bears responsibility for these errors.
